Gilbert

Gilbert was among 240 students from high schools around the nation who were selected to participate in the program.

BWSI is a summer engineering program for rising high school seniors. Students worked on hands-on projects, took online courses and attended lectures presented by leading scientific researchers. The program is hosted by the MIT Lincoln Laboratory Beaver Works Center, a research center in Cambridge jointly chartered by MIT Lincoln Laboratory, the MIT School of Engineering and the MIT Department of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

The diversity of the courses is intended to appeal to a wide variety of talented students. Students in the
